

Instructions for Apple IIGs

The Apple IIGs version of STAR SAGA: ONE™ Beyond the Boundary requires an Apple IIGs personal computer with at least 512K of memory. If your system includes a RAM disk, make sure that the "Total Free RAM" listed on the RAM disk control panel is at least 426K.

To start the Star Saga program, simply boot up your computer with the Star Saga diskette in a 3.5 inch disk drive. After brief displays of the standard Apple IIGs and ProDOS startup screens, the Star Saga title screen will appear with an indication that loading is in progress. The border will flash until about 15 seconds remain in the loading process. After loading, you will be ready to play. The program will ask you whether you want to start a new game or resume an old one. To proceed, please follow the instructions on page one of the Host Guide and Player Reference Manual.

Each time you boot the program, you will notice that there are certain places in the program that require some additional loading time, such as restarting an old game, selecting the first character to enter plots and landing on a new planet. Most of these occur only at the beginning of each program session, so if the program seems slow at first, bear with it — it will improve as the session continues.

Backup Copies

We highly recommend that you make a back-up copy of your Star Saga diskette. The game is not copy-protected.

Installation on a Hard Disk

To copy the Star Saga files onto your hard disk, boot up your computer, put the Star Saga diskette into a disk drive and copy the following files into a single folder on your hard disk: Starsaga.sys16, Starsaga.gs, Starsaga.spok, Starsaga.help and, if you have a game in progress, Starsaga.game. This last file will not be present if no game is in progress. Once these files are installed on your hard disk, to start the program, double-click the application Starsaga.sys16.

Warranty and Registration

A warranty and registration card is included in your package. Please fill out and mail this card.
